

Appointment in Electronia...

LIKE PILOTS circling to a meeting-point in outer space, the engineers of Bendix have a rendezvous with destiny. Their "invisible crew," which now mans our machines of war, will serve a whole new age of transportation. And to them, electrons are not dream-stuff... but everyday tools.

It is thus, now, in all divisions of Bendix, Scintilla projects electronic control of high-altitude ignition. Eclipse perfects electronic regulation of zinc-air-generated voltage. Friez sends electronic weathermen aloft, to report from the stratosphere. Bendix Marine uses electrons in the navigation of warships. Pioneer develops a new captain for "THE INVISIBLE CREW"... the first all-electronic Automatic Pilot. And all these are in addition to the electronic functions of communication and detection... long mastered at Bendix Radio.

Bendix engineers draw upon electronics as upon all science, each in his special field. Some divisions excel in precision manufacture, some in mechanical invention, others in research. It is the merging of their talents, in ever more versatile members of "THE INVISIBLE CREW," that makes our Vehicles of Victory stand out as the Transports of Tomorrow. They may meet, next, in Detroit. But imaginatively they have... an Appointment in Electronia.
